- Overall everything looks great, I especially like the bottom piece having both the source and the logo to take them back to the top/home if they so wish.
- I especially love the way the mobile view looks.
- The only thing I think needs to be fixed is the desktop view. The text seems a bit too big, especially for the title, and having the image cut off as the first sight of the page doesn't look the best. Since it is a desktop view, the image could be moved to the side and show off more text at the same time.
  - Designer was actually thinking of doing so already
- Aside from that, all comments are tiny adjustment nitpicks regarding the size/location of specific objects (like the edge of the logo skirting too close to the edges of their respective borders)
- Question from designer:
  - Change sources page so that each page directly links to the wikipedia article or have a separate page compiling all the sources?
  - I said to have each page directly link to the pikipedia, since having a compiling of all the sources seemed like an unnecessary middle man we could cut out.
